Message from the Hospital CEO and Foundation Chair

Five years ago, El Camino Hospital announced a bold development plan for the Mountain View campus:

- Expansion of the North Drive parking structure, including installation of photovoltaic panels to generate approximately 20 percent of the hospital's power
- Construction of an integrated medical office building with tenant physician offices and space for services that did not relocate to the new hospital
- Construction of a mental health pavilion to replace the behavioral health unit that is now nearly 60 years old
- Renovation of the Women's Hospital to expand the neonatal intensive care unit and labor & delivery rooms, and transition from double occupancy to all private mother-baby rooms
- Demolition of the old main hospital
- Design for environmental sustainability and strive for LEED (Leadership in Energy & Environmental Design) certification, the globally recognized symbol of excellence in green building.

The hospital's plans inspired bold thinking at El Camino Hospital Foundation and today, we are proud to announce three transformational gifts:

- John and Susan Sobrato have contributed $5 million for the construction of the integrated medical office building. In recognition of their generosity, the building will be called the Sobrato Pavilion.
- Tad and Dianne Taube have donated $5 million to endow the Tad and Dianne Taube Program for Adolescent Behavioral Health, which will support direct care services. In recognition of their generosity, the new mental health and addiction services building will be called the Taube Pavilion.
- Mary and Doug Scrivner have named the Scrivner Center for Mental Health & Addiction Services. It will be the umbrella under which all mental health and addiction programs at El Camino Hospital are identified. Their $5 million gift is funding the Mary and Doug Scrivner Endowment for Adolescent Mental Health Innovation to support the continued development of pioneering programs to meet the emerging mental health needs of our community's youth and young adults.

These inspirational contributions are among the largest from individual donors in the Foundation's history. With their gifts and yours, we are fulfilling the promise to heal mind as well as body, provide compassionate treatment that meets the highest standards of care, and support the healthy families that build stronger community.

Sobrato Pavilion

John and Susan Sobrato

THE SOBRATO FAMILY TRADITION of civic involvement began with Ann Sobrato (1915-2000) who exemplified the ideals of hard work and public service, and cultivated these same values in her son, John Sobrato. Since 1996, the Sobrato family has contributed more than $451 million to improve the Silicon Valley community in a variety of ways. More than a third has been directed toward education. The balance has provided rent-free space to nonprofit organizations and supported the delivery of essential community services, health care, affordable housing, youth development, the arts, and strengthening employment opportunities for underprivileged individuals.

"We believe that by sharing our philanthropy, we lead by example. When people see the Sobrato name on this building, I hope they will see themselves and their own potential to make contributions like these, to recognize that their contributions can make a huge difference. The needs in our community will never be met by one donor or one family, but together we can build a more inclusive and truly prosperous Silicon Valley."

THE SEVEN-STORY, 257,792 SQUARE-FOOT SOBRATO PAVILION is El Camino Hospital's first high-rise building. It will be home to the Norma Melchor Heart & Vascular Institute, Peter C. Fung, MD Stroke Center, Pamela and Edward Taft Center for Clinical Research, Breast Health Center and outpatient laboratory. These services will be located along a first floor concourse that wraps around the hospital's central courtyard, which is being enlarged and fully enclosed, creating a loop that connects the pavilion to the main hospital. Other hospital and outpatient services, including endoscopy and respiratory care, will be located on the second floor, which will also connect seamlessly to the main hospital. The top four floors will house tenant physician offices. The building will have its own visitor parking structure for patients visiting these offices.

The Sobrato Pavilion will provide the first official home for the Norma Melchor Heart & Vascular Institute. The space will have consultation, exam and treatment rooms, an area for diagnostic tests, offices for physicians and administrative staff, and specialty clinics, including one devoted to heart care for women. "The Norma Melchor Heart & Vascular Institute is recognized for excellence in interventional and surgical procedures, and is known for leadership in innovation," says Medical Director Frederick St. Goar, MD. "Our new offices will ease access for patients and facilitate even greater collaboration among physicians, enabling us to become a destination for outpatient cardiac care as well."

Dr. Silaja Yitta, El Camino Hospital's director of breast imaging and intervention, is looking forward to moving into the 5,000 square foot Breast Health Center. The design reflects her patient-centered approach to care. "We are creating a spa-like environment that is comforting, nurturing, and relaxing," she says, "where we will be able to provide every service under one roof, from screening mammograms to MRIs, biopsies, and breast localization."

The Sobrato Pavilion will open in November 2019.

"I hope by investing in this exciting advancement in the hospital's infrastructure that we are contributing to making Silicon Valley a center for top quality health care, where all residents have equal access to the knowledge, tools, and supports they need to lead healthy lives." - JOHN SOBRATO

Scrivner Center for Mental Health & Addiction

Mary and Doug Scrivner

IN 2015, LOS ALTOS HILLS RESIDENTS MARY AND DOUG SCRIVNER made a $1 million challenge gift to start an endowment to meet growing demand for After-School Program Interventions and Resiliency Education® (ASPIRE), El Camino Hospital's intensive outpatient youth and young adult mental health program. Matching gifts large and small poured in and the challenge fueled the program's expansion.

The couple's new gift will name the Scrivner Center for Mental Health & Addiction Services, the umbrella covering all of El Camino Hospital's mental health and addiction programs. "This gift is a vote of confidence in El Camino Hospital's extraordinary commitment to focusing on the needs of the community it serves. Mental health issues are at the heart of so many of our community's – indeed our nation's – challenges, especially those facing our youth," explains Doug.

The gift will be added to the ASPIRE endowment, which will be named the Mary and Doug Scrivner Endowment for Adolescent Mental Health Innovation. "We want El Camino Hospital to be able to respond creatively and effectively to emerging adolescent mental health needs. The problems keep changing and getting bigger, and we keep learning about root causes and how things are related," Doug says. The endowment will be used to support ASPIRE's expansion, community outreach, research, pilot programs, creation of technology tools and applications, parent support and education, public policy and advocacy, and similar innovations.

"This is one of the biggest gifts we will ever give but being able to share our success and make a difference while we are still here is special," Doug says. "We hope others will share our passion and support these efforts," concludes Mary.

"We hope El Camino Hospital's innovative programs can be replicated and shared, that the hospital can provide proven resources to other communities to help tackle what is a national problem."
– MARY SCRIVNER

THE 56,000 SQUARE-FOOT, TWO-STORY TAUBE PAVILION will be home to the Scrivner Center for Mental Health & Addiction Services. Proudly and visibly integrated into El Camino Hospital's Mountain View campus, its design reflects the hospital's unique approach to mental health care: patient and family-centered, with the adaptability to respond to the changing needs of the community.

The first floor has 36 private patient rooms, conversation areas, counseling rooms, and beautiful, safe outdoor spaces to promote wellness and recovery. It will have between three and five treatment zones that are flexibly configured so they can be adjusted as the patient population changes. As patients' symptoms abate, they will progress through zones that become increasingly open and less restrictive, reinforcement of their increasing wellness.

Adults with thought disorders (schizophrenia, schizoaffective disorders) will be separated from other patients in the most restrictive zone, which will improve safety and care for everyone. Patients with mood disorders (depression, anxiety and bipolar disorder) will be treated in an acute care unit. Women of childbearing age experiencing severe depression or anxiety related to pregnancy and childbirth, menopause, or traumatic life events, will have their own unit. It will be one of only two inpatient units in the country for the treatment of perinatal depression.

The second floor will house the acute partial hospitalization, continuing care, addiction and dual diagnosis programs, and will have meeting rooms for other outpatient treatment and support groups. These adult outpatient programs will provide continued, step-down care until resources in the community are identified that can help the patient manage his or her mental health needs moving forward.

The Taube Pavilion is scheduled to open in September 2019. Landscaping of the centerpiece James and Akiko Satake Courtyard will commence after the old main hospital and remainder of the old behavioral health unit are razed.

“The new pavilion gives us the opportunity to increase inpatient space so we can serve more people. It is a concrete and visible sign to the community that we are committed to doing this work.”

– DAN BECKER, MD,
MEDICAL DIRECTOR OF MENTAL HEALTH AND ADDICTION SERVICES

Tad and Dianne Taube

TAD AND DIANNE TAUBE RECOGNIZE THE NEED TO ADDRESS THE CHALLENGES of mental health care in the community and to encourage research in the field, with a particular emphasis on youth wellness. They intend their gift to deepen and broaden the excellent services El Camino Hospital provides to help youth and adults become and remain successful in their lives. That is why they are putting their name on the Taube Pavilion and establishing the Tad and Dianne Taube Program for Adolescent Behavioral Health, which will support direct care services.

The Taubes note that adolescence is a particularly vulnerable time, which can be marked by depression, anxiety, and mood disorders, all of which may lead to drug use. “Dianne and I see that young people today are facing a new world of challenges,” Tad Taube observes. “We want to educate families and raise awareness about the risks and signs of mental health issues in children and adolescents. It can make an all-important difference in their lives.”

The couple previously made significant donations to Stanford University School of Medicine and Lucile Packard Children’s Hospital to launch the Tad and Dianne Taube Youth Addiction Initiative and the Taube Stanford Concussion Collaborative. Understanding that success in medical outcomes, as in philanthropy, is most powerful through collaboration, they hope the new program will facilitate partnership between El Camino Hospital’s specialists and colleagues at the Youth Addiction Initiative, the Children’s Health Council and other local organizations to strengthen adolescent mental health and addictive behavior services in the community.

“Mental health challenges are a neglected and profoundly stigmatized issue in both adults and young people.”
